

Grinstead Gateway Update

Plans for the Grinstead Gateway project are moving ahead. The developer of the beautification plan, landscape architect Bill Ray, met with representative of Operation Brightside in late October. Rosie and Charlie Scott, who worked hard to maintain the current median and have volunteered to help with the implementation of Ray's plan, were also present, along with Council President Bill Hollander.

The plan has now been submitted to state officials, and the Council hopes for final approval in the near future. If all goes according to schedule, construction could begin very early next year and the first plantings could be made next spring.

Plans for the Grinstead Gateway were detailed in last month's newsletter. When the project is completed, the median on Grinstead Drive between South Peterson Avenue and the I-64 interchange, and the land on either side of Grinstead north of the interchange, will be landscaped. The project is being funded by the Council and the City of Louisville, through a grant from First Ward Alderman Melissa Mershon.

Hair Tips

Men & Hair

Say goodbye to the dowdy guy in the rumpled chinos and lumpy hair. Today's man is ready to strut. And to get him looking good, he needs a full range of top quality salon services. The slickest cut...careful grooming...and well manicured nails.

Men are learning what women have known for years: the salon is THE one-stop shop for looking good. Grooming in the 1990's is simple, direct, and decidedly masculine. For most men today, time is the essence, so services are quick. Some of the things men look for specifically in a salon (besides a haircut), are a shoe shine, beard/mustache trim, and facials.

Men are wary of skin and nail care services, assuming that they're for women only. For example, a man's skin suffers far more environmental abuse than a woman's, thus is shows more lines and grooves. Couple that with the fact that men have more sebaceous glands than women and require cleansing treatments for the face.

Manicures and facials are not only grooming techniques but can be labeled as "de-stressors." When making a hair appointment, take the time to get a facial or manicure, totally for relaxation.

A shape-up trim is as important to a successful man's image as a good basic cut. Frequent trims prevent an unkempt look that could hamper a career.
